UNIVERSITY OF NORTH DAKOTA
BUILDING DECOR GUIDELINES

UND’s brand doesn’t stop at the website or print materials. Creating spaces that inspire school spirit and enhance the University’s brand is essential. The spaces where we spend time are also spaces visitors experience. And while physical spaces are less fluid than other media, they shouldn’t be ignored. Instead, spaces should reflect our pride for UND. This document outlines some standardized areas of environmental branding.

Space Categories

- Office Spaces: Office spaces can range from individual offices to conference rooms. These spaces can have a wide variety of uses, therefore, they should have basic, branded palettes. Individualization of private offices can be expressed through an individual’s decor.
- Lobbies and reception areas: these spaces should be inviting, open and professional.
- Classroom, study spaces and co-working spaces: These spaces should provide focus yet provide a sense of UND pride.
- Residence Halls and other student spaces: These spaces should feel modern, comfortable and embody school spirit.

Environmental Graphics

Environmental graphics can have a major impact on a space when used correctly. Placement, material selection and messaging are important factors that must be approved by UND’s Environmental Branding Review Board before a project can begin.

Wayfinding & Signage

Wayfinding and signage are critical to helping individuals navigate campus. Providing a consistent sign family not only strengthens the UND brand, but provides a seamless experience for students, staff, faculty and visitors.

The Details

Each element of an indoor and outdoor space is important to the overall aesthetic and sense of place. Additional elements such as furniture and lighting*, landscaping, sculptures, benches, trash and recycling bins, bike racks, tables, etc. must be approved by UND’s Environmental Branding Review Board before a project can begin.

* Furniture Standards: UND green and shades of gray and black shall be used for all upholstery & laminates. Light shades of upholstery and or laminates will not be accepted. Requestors must coordinate with UND’s Environmental Branding Review Board to meet requirements based on vendor product lines.

Lighting Standards: LED fixture with Lutron Vive integrated controls.
