PROGRAM

The University of North Dakota (UND) Wellness & Health Promotion unit is coordinating a 4-week Get Moving challenge designed for UND staff, faculty, students and their teammates (co-workers, spouses/partners, and family members) to track steps for a healthier YOU!

If you have a Fitbit, Garmin, Jawbone, or other activity tracking device, please use those. There are also Smart phone applications that you can use, such as Accupedo. There is also a step conversion chart you can use to convert other activities into steps if you have injuries that prevent you from moving. Remember, social distancing is of utmost importance right now. We are encouraging folks to utilize outdoor recreation if able (dress warm) remembering to keep a social distance of 6 feet.

RESOURCES

This chart may be helpful in determining your activity level and to help set goals for yourself:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Steps per day</th>
<th>Activity level</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>&lt;5,000</td>
<td>Sedentary</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5,000 – 7,000</td>
<td>Low Active</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7,500 – 9,999</td>
<td>Somewhat Active</td>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>&gt;12,500</td>
<td>Highly Active</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Increasing your steps:
For most people, increasing your average daily steps each week by 500 per day is a reasonable goal. For example, if you are currently averaging about 5,000 steps a day, your goal for the first week would be 5,500 steps. For week two, your goal would be 6,000 steps each day and so on. Your ultimate goal over time would be to reach 10,000 steps a day (or more!). You may not be able to achieve 10K-A-Day within the 4-week challenge, but we encourage you to continue the progression! More information HERE. (*2,000 steps = 1 Mile, *10K/Day = 5 Miles)

COUNTING STEPS FOR OTHER ACTIVITIES

Don’t forget: You can reach your step goals in other ways. With the following step conversion chart, you can calculate the number of steps equivalent to other activities you might take part in.

How to calculate steps from the CONVERSION CHART:
Simply, multiply the numbers of steps indicated next to the activity by the number of minutes you spent on the activity. For example, stacking firewood equals 2,670 steps (89 steps x 30 minutes).
